

TEAM EVALUATION FORM

First and Last Name: David Lawlor

Date: 12/9/2025

Team Members:

- Owen Dargis
- Thomas Feyen
- Trinity Weatherall
- Wyatt Wobbema

Professional team members may be asked to evaluate their peers' performance over the course of a project. These evaluations allow members to (a) provide constructive feedback, (b) decide whether the team should modify or adjust their course of action, or (c) ensure the roles and responsibilities divided in the team charter are being followed. Evaluations are also good practice for delivering information in a constructive format that emphasizes "you attitude" and encourages good will. Remember, the goal is not to criticize or condemn but instead offer a fair, honest assessment of the team's collaboration efforts.

PART ONE:

Answer the following questions for each team member:

1. What was this member's specific role on the team? What did they agree to contribute during the Team Charter assignment?
2. How did this team member contribute to the recommendation report? What skills, strengths, or talents did this team member bring to the group?
3. What (constructive) advice or suggestions would you offer this team member to help them perform their role more effectively or better meet their agreed upon responsibilities in future collaborative settings?

Team Member 1: [Owen Dargis]

1. Team Leader, Editor, Recommendations, Introduction, Conclusion
2. This team member was a leader and provided a lot of good insight to aid the group in completing the recommendation report. They had a lot of previous experience with similar modes of technical communication.
3. Try to keep your team members in the loop more with what needs to be completed, maybe more extensive meetings or covering information.

Team Member 2: [Thomas Feyen]

1. Data Images, Results
2. This team member provided insight into different aspects of the workflow for this assignment.
3. This isn't necessarily a criticism and this person in particular but as they were the one who interpreted the data it became obvious that we could have had some improvements or better foresight on our testing methodology.

Team Member 3: [Trinity Weatherall]

1. Results Section, Conclusion, Recommendations,
2. This team member was very positive in their tonality and was active in the group chat. Overall, a good supporting member and completed their work as expected.
3. Not much to complain about here besides how they missed the first day, so I lacked a proper introduction to this person.

Team Member 4: [Wyatt Wobbema]

1. Methods Section, Abstract/Executive Summary
2. This person was active in discussion and gave their insight into our report and helped structure how we would approach this assignment.
3. I think one thing this person could benefit from is maybe asking for help or advice. Their work was good but sometimes it seemed like they would almost work more than others comparatively.

PART TWO:

How have you performed over the course of this project? Professional employees are often asked to assess their own actions and describe their contributions to a collaborative project. These “self-evaluations” are a chance to (a) highlight your role on the project, (b) ensure that you’ve upheld your responsibilities to your team members, and (c) inform supervisors or managers of the value you personally bring to collaborative projects.

1. What was your specific role on the team? What did you agree to contribute during the Team Charter assignment?
I was a team member I oversaw the Letter of Transmittal and Abstract/Executive Summary. I also gave small insight into the Team Charter. I ensured to listen to discussion and give my opinion when asked or needed.
2. How did you contribute to the recommendation report? What skills, strengths, or talents did you bring to the group?
I wrote the Letter of Transmittal and helped with the Abstract/Executive Summary. I completed the letter of transmittal myself and then I believe Owen edited it a bit after the fact. I was going to write the abstract/executive summary, but Wyatt kindly completed most of it before I could. So, I proofread his work and fixed a couple of grammatical errors. I also filled in data and performed the volunteer study where I had two friends participate.
3. Is there any area where you could have performed your role more effectively or better met your agreed upon responsibilities?
I can recognize that I really didn’t complete that much of the assignment compared to others in the group in the future I would like to volunteer for more as my team members did a great job of taking the initiative this time. Like stated previously I wish I could have wrote more of the Abstract/Executive Summary as it was supposed to be a collaborative task. At the time I was swamped with assignments the day before so I waited until the day it was due to do it and Wyatt assumed I may not be doing it.
